Heather's Humming Bird Tip

Its hummingbird season, and we all love to see them in our gardens. Feeders can be messy and time consuming but natural plants look great, are easy to maintain, and feed both hummingbirds and honeybees. Below is a list of native plants you can add to your garden or window boxes to attract pollinators.

- Trumpet Honeysuckles - Not only are the bright red flowers beautiful to look at, their smell is amazing, and Ruby Throated Hummingbirds love them! This plant does not need to be planted every year and does not get as big as other varieties of honeysuckle.
- Red Cardinal Flower - Flowering in mid to late summer, this beautiful plant is fairly low maintenance and enjoys partial shade. Brings a pop of bright red color to your garden that lasts all summer!
- Bee Balm - Easy to grow, deer and drought resistant! The purple flowers are loved by hummingbirds, bees, and butterflies! Enjoys full sun and can tolerate shade. Blooms July through September
- Sage - Attracts humming birds, butterflies, and honeybees with the added bonus of being useful for cooking! Sage adds an earthy flavor to foods and can be used a salt substitute.
